

Pork Butt Weekly Write-Up

Intro

Not sure if anyone has noticed, but the NFL is slowly transitioning to a defensive style league. Over the last year or so, offensive numbers have been trending downward, same with our league. Knowing this, overall, our league scores are down ten percent from last year at this time. Time to move forward to the shit show. The Goddamn Jets showed the Patriots that there is a new kid in town, for the week. The Giants figured out how to win, with extra points this week. The Vikings made a statement with their drubbing of the Texans (quickly, get Darnold on your team!). Malik Willis is showing the Packers that they do not need Love as they beat a hapless Titans squad. The Seahawks showed they can beat a Tua-less Dolphins as Gino Smith continues to prove that, after ten years in the league he has figured it out. Cowboys laid a big egg (although the score ended up close, it was garbage time points) this week, as did the Raiders who for some fucking reason decided that they did not need to play this week as the Panthers showed them who is boss, while using the Red Rocket (or was it the Pink Rocket?). Da Bears showed again, (seriously getting old with this useless O-Line) that when you do not block, the other team looks amazing, the Colts handed them a painful loss.

Game of the Week

Andrew vs Dave

Projections where Dave was going to finish this game with a thirty-point win, easy cruising. Not so fast my friend! Going into the final minute of the game, Andrew had overcome a forty-one-point deficit to get the ball on the one-yard line. Burrow to Higgins for a touchdown would have given Andrew a two-point victory, but the play was not successful, denied like a Zoophilia at a County Fair. Next play Bengals ran the ball in for the touchdown, securing the victory for Dave. There was no back and forth with this one, it was working into a beat down, but in the end, Dave escaped 116-106 for their first win of the season, and denying Andrew his first win.

Matchups

Jake vs Jason

This one was over at half as Jake flexed some serious muscle this week. Prescott threw up thirty (in garbage time, ala Jay Cutler mode), followed by Henry's thirty points. Jason had a great showing by Allen, but his league leading thirty-eight were not enough to overcome the massive debt, and the final in this game was 173-113.

Brandon vs Dino

Not sure when this game was over, during the scheduling part of the season? While the numbers are not astronomical, they are impressive. Brandon got solid, albeit small, production up and down the lineup (his biggest scorer was Jefferson with twenty points). Dino was not able to get things going as the struggle was real from stem to stern. Brandon cruised during this week, 124-67.

Mike vs Sky

Two men enter, one man leave. That is the rule of Thunderdome. This was a close game from the first whistle to the last. Both teams giveth, and taketh. Sky was looking to remain atop the league with the other unbeaten, while Mike was looking for his first win. When the dust settled, and the Gatorade jugs were empty, Mike walked away with his first win, sending Sky to the island of misfit toys 135.50-119.50.

Josh vs Rich

This matchup kicked off Thursday, and Josh got to a big forty-point lead. Rich continued to chip away that lead, as Josh continued to add to it. Entering MNF, Rich was trailing by less than twenty, and both teams had people playing in the MNF games. The night ended with Rich pulling off the come from behind victory to remain the league's only unbeaten as the final score was 145.50-133.

Playoffs

It is time, we have one more week of the Honeymoon phase before we enter the Grind, which is when we start talking playoffs!

The Sack

The race for the best hat on Earth has begun, and these teams are leading the way.

Final Handy

The ashes have been scattered, there is only one. One team who has yet to taste the bitter flavor of defeat. One team who stands higher than the rest. It is our collective duty as a league to ensure that the lone unbeaten, gets his first loss. I am putting out an APB on Rich, he must go down (like your cousin at a family reunion), we cannot and will not have a team bask in the glory of no losses. Brandon, you have been chosen by fate this week to make that happen. This is your moment to peak (not like that time you peaked in High School) and make your life better. For the rest of us, do what you need to do to remain relevant as we enter the last week of our Honeymoon. With that, may your beer be cold, Karma finds you today, and fuck your team....'mish out.
